lie mind more firmly against the use of shoes that have been dubbed boots, but the electric current for inflicting death marked. They have broad soles, low heels, tahment, it would be furnished by the hideous bungle at Auburn Jail yesterday ing or lacing to do by this new freak of morning.

Every feeling of humanity was outraged by that sickening scene. The only cool man present was the victim, who would certainly have lost his nerve could be have even faintly foreknown the horrid onslancht which the subtle electric fluid was to make upon his body.

An utterly inexperienced Jail Warden as the Chief Inquisitor, mortified physicians sanctioning the brutal experiment, daged assistants contributing to the ghastly confusion by their inefficiency, and strong men swooning in deathly disgust at the nightmare, this is the civilized (?) picture of the first electric execu-

The press and the public slike cry out against any repetition of this scene, the possibility of which can only be removed by repealing the law of electric death. Every promise that it held out has been falsified by the event.

In the name of justice, civilization and humanity do away with it!

"Trelt sleepy and all tired out most of the time.
My throat would get seep off and on. In the merning I sweap felt more itred than I did when I went to ned the sight be ore. On the whole, it was a miserable seeps on. One day I was reading the case a sledy woo had been ored or catarrh by Drs.
Eliar and Lipsands. Her symptoms were just tike from estarth, too. I consulted Drs. Biff and Copeland. I found their terms very low, and they treated me for my troub e. My appetits is good now: I leel a lendful I have not felt so well sines I first contracted the treaths. What was most remarkarile was the fact that I got so good a result for so little money."
